Rapper swears off Saskatoon after show turns violent

Bear spray deployed, two taken to hospital.
Joey Stylez says attack was targeted at individual; opening act removed from show as result of incident

A Detroit-based rapper is swearing off Saskatoon after doing a concert that broke out in violence this past weekend.

Out of fear for his fans, Joey Stylez is vowing to hold no more shows in the city.

Joseph Marlin Laplante, better known by his stage name Joey Stylez, said on Sunday that because of the incident at the Rock the Bottom bar on Saturday resulting in a number of people bear-sprayed and two people sent to hospital, he has removed an opening act from his Feather + Rosary Tour and won't play Saskatoon again.

"My shows are supposed to be for everyone to celebrate life and have a good time, where everyone is able to laugh and listen to good music — it's entertainment," Laplante told Metro while on the road to Calgary.

"But it's not entertaining when you have to be worried about if someone is going to attack everybody."

He explained that the violence broke out about 12:50 a.m. when a performer in an opening act, Skye Stoney, was being called off the stage by a group of people in a hostile manner.

Laplante said he tried to calm the situation, but eventually "chaos broke loose" and resulted in the entire club hit with bear spray. However, he stressed that no one on the tour is a gang member and that the conflict was rooted in a confrontation between one individual and those in the crowd.

Laplante noted that while Stoney has been removed from the tour, the show will go on. He added that a show in Prince Albert the following day was a success.

Saskatoon police said as a result of the incident, a 33-year-old man found outside Rock the Bottom was taken to hospital with life-threatening injuries and remains there in critical but stable condition.

A 19-year-old man with non-life-threatening injuries was also taken to hospital, but has been released and is facing firearms-related charges.

An investigation by the city police major crimes unit is underway.

Slippery roads

Cops urging Sask. drivers to take it slow in the snow

Police in Saskatchewan's largest cities are advising drivers to slow down as cold weather and snow make road conditions dangerous.

Staff Sgt. Paul Tate, a watch commander with the Regina Police Service, said on Sunday that officers were dispatched to 15 collisions in the previous 24 hours, with one crash between a vehicle and a snowplow resulting in serious injuries.

He said the Christmas season might play a role in the collisions.

"People are preoccupied with the holiday season," Tate said. "There's parties going on, people are shopping. They're occupied with what they're going to buy rather than the driving."

He also noted that someone in a hurry might not properly defrost a windshield and windows.

Saskatoon police were dispatched to nearly 60 collisions on Saturday and Sunday.

"We're asking motorists to drive defensively, slow down and keep their speeds according to the road conditions," said Staff Sgt. Lisa Lafreniere, a Saskatoon police watch commander.

"Lots of the time, that's going to be less than what the posted speed limit is."

Regina and Saskatoon will get a bit of a break from the cold in the coming days, though the temperature will drop back below normal by the end of the week.

Public engagement. More than 600,000 people viewed picture online in first 24 hours

MORGAN MODJESKI
morgan.modjeski@metronews.ca

While engagements are usually events shared with family and friends, a Saskatoon couple has shared theirs with hundreds of thousands of people worldwide after a photograph of their proposal went viral.

Matt Eagle, 21, proposed to his fiancée, Jasmine Godoy, 19, when she arrived at Saskatoon's John G. Diefenbaker International Airport from Europe on Dec. 9, and as mutual friend and photographer Jenna Rutherford stood by to capture the moment.

Two days later, a friend uploaded one of her photos to Reddit.com, the "front page of the Internet," and a global online community.

On the website's "pics" subreddit, which has more than four million subscribers, the photo was viewed more than 600,000 times in 24 hours. And the couple is confident that more than one million people have seen it.

"It's a little surreal, actually," Eagle said on Sunday.

"It's just hard to really even think or fathom. It's just weird thinking that people would even care about it, but it's nice," he added.

"It's incredible that one picture can go on the Internet and then in the course of 24 hours, over 600,000 people can look at it, comment on it, like it or dislike it — however they're feeling."

Godoy, the bride-to-be, said she had always hoped for a memorable proposal, and now has one she'll never forget.

"I always told Matt, 'When you propose, make sure it's memorable because we're going to have to tell people forever.' And so it's funny it got on the Internet," she said.

"It's kind of unbelievable," she added. "This week has been pretty crazy."

When asked whether Eagle will share wedding photos from the now-famous engagement with the online community, he said he hadn't given it much thought. But he noted that it's something he'll consider.

Newly engaged Saskatoon couple Matt Eagle and Jasmine Godoy have unwittingly shared their engagement with the world, as a photograph of the proposal at John G. Diefenbaker International Airport, inset, went viral online.

Nelson Mandela laid to rest

Solemnity and joy. Several thousand gather to take part in ceremonies for beloved former president and anti-apartheid hero

Mandela's widow, Graca Machel, wipes her eyes during the service. ODD ANDERSEN/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Nelson Mandela was buried in his home village on Sunday after a funeral that mixed ancient tribal rituals with a display of the might of the new, integrated South Africa.

Military officers rolled Mandela's flag-draped coffin to the family burial plot in the village of Qunu as formations of planes and military helicopters flew over the hills where thousands of mourners had gathered.

Unlike the public memorial on Tuesday at a stadium that was rife with problems, the funeral and burial went smoothly. The ceremonies mixed solemnity with joy at Mandela's accomplishments, lasted all morning and into the afternoon and were fit for African royalty.

Several thousand gathered in a huge white tent at the Mandela family compound for the state funeral that preceded a private service at the gravesite. Songs, speeches and the boom of artillery rang across the fields.

Mandela, who spent 27 years in jail as a prisoner of the racist white government and emerged to lead a transition to a multiracial democracy, died on Dec. 5 at the age of 95 after a long illness.

His portrait looked over the assembly in the tent from behind a bank of 95 candles representing each year of his remarkable life. His casket, transported to the tent on a gun carriage, rested on a carpet of cow skins below a lectern where speakers delivered eulogies.

Ahmed Kathrada, an activist who was jailed on Robben Island with Mandela, remembered his old friend's "abundant reserves" of love, patience and tolerance. He said it was painful when he saw Mandela for the last time, months ago in his hospital bed. Some listeners wiped away tears as Kathrada spoke. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ticketing plan could save money on policing

Proposal. Officers could ticket people for offences such as trespassing, nudity

A demonstrator smokes a joint on Parliament Hill in Ottawa on April 20, 2010. Police would have the option of ticketing people for some minor offences under a new plan. PAWEL DWULIT/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Police would have the option of ticketing people for a range of minor offences — instead of laying criminal charges — under a plan that could yield significant savings for the cash-strapped justice system.

Timothy Smith, a spokesman for the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police, says the idea emerged from discussions fostered by the federal government on curbing rising policing costs.

Under the proposal, officers would have the option of ticketing people for offences such as causing a disturbance, public nudity, falsifying an employment record, soliciting prostitution, vagrancy or trespassing.

It builds on a resolution the Chiefs of Police passed last August that would give forces the discretion to issue a ticket under the Contraventions Act for possession of a small amount of cannabis.

Last January, the federal Public Safety minister hosted a summit on the economics of policing that included officers and chiefs from across the country, government officials and academics. Officials say the cost of policing is steadily rising — hitting more than $12 billion in 2010 — even though the crime rate is falling.

WikiLeaks. 13 federal departments had contracts with U.S. firm

At least 13 Canadian government agencies have had subscriptions with U.S. private intelligence firm Strategic Forecasting, Inc. or Stratfor, sometimes dubbed a shadow CIA, newly released WikiLeaks emails indicate.

Stratfor came under fire recently after a leaked company document prepared for an oil company outlined ways to counter activist groups, such as Greenpeace, who oppose Canada's oilsands development.

The same cache of leaked emails indicates Canadian federal agencies have purchased at least half a million dollars in Stratfor services.

Emails from January 2009 and February 2011 show invoices of $13,125 and $13,725 for one-year Stratfor subscriptions for Foreign Affairs and International Trade, which were not publicly disclosed by the department.

Under proactive disclosure policy, Canadian government contracts worth more than $10,000 must be posted on the web.

Foreign Affairs spokesperson Jean-Bruno Villeneuve says there was a clerical error in not reporting the contracts.

Stratfor declined to answer questions about the recent leaks, referring The Canadian Press to a posted statement about its policy not to comment on any of the WikiLeaks documents.

Naughty or nice? Do your homework before giving to charity this season

Holiday season leave you feeling like decking one of the halls? Like ringing Santa's bell?

Studies show charitable giving boosts happiness and reduces stress, says Lara Aknin, an assistant professor of psychology at Simon Fraser University.

Good deeds put us in a good mood, but when it comes to playing Santa for social good, make sure you know who has been naughty and who has been nice.

MoneySense Magazine issues an annual list of the top 100 charities, based on its analysis of fundraising and spending activities.

This year, the magazine gave top grades to the Nature Conservancy Canada, the Canadian Red Cross, the Calgary Interfaith Food Bank, the Royal Ontario Museum Foundation and the United Way, among others. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Charities angling for donations, such as The Salvation Army, are ubiquitous right now. Before dropping cash in a kettle, do your homework. THE CANADIAN PRESS/AP

Canada Goose spreads wings, migrates overseas

Status symbol. The Toronto-based parka company is flying high, and aims to soar to new heights worldwide

Dani Reiss, president and CEO of Canada Goose Inc., in his office. THE CANADIAN PRESS

The head of Canada Goose is setting his sights on India and other parts of Asia as he looks beyond cold weather for future growth in the jacket business.

Dani Reiss concedes that stocking shelves in warm climates might seem usual, but he says it makes sense for the company's high-end outerwear, which has become a fashion statement as well as a way to stay warm.

"Cold is relative. Tokyo is our best market in Asia and it never goes below zero," the chief executive said in an interview at the company's headquarters in midtown Toronto.

"Just like someone in Toronto buys a Range Rover, someone in Tokyo buys a Canada Goose jacket."

Canada Goose is at a turning point.

Take a glimpse of any city street this time of year and you'll likely see Canadians wrapped in the jackets emblazoned with the company's trademark badge on the sleeve and a fur-trimmed hood. Reiss wants to boost the company's reputation beyond Canada where it sometimes seems like the jackets couldn't get any more popular.

Last week, Canada Goose struck a deal with Bain Capital that gives the U.S. private investment firm a majority stake in the brand and promises the kind of financial support that will help it push into new markets. Reiss will maintain what he calls a "significant minority position."

"They'll consider expanding the brand beyond just coats," said David Detomasi, assistant professor of international business at Queen's University.

Think Canada Goose watches, sports equipment or even down duvets that are marketed as the warmest bedding in the world. THE CANADIAN PRESS

OLD, WHITE GUYS SHINE AS SANTA

URBAN COMPASS

Paul Sullivan
saskatoon@metronews.ca

Every year at this time, old white guys come into their own.

This is when these vestiges of the old world order emerge from the dark corners of their richly earned exile, and occupy the malls and street corners in their symbolic fake beards and red and white suits.

For a couple of magic weeks, old white guys are loved and trusted and even revered once again — but only if they agree to be called Santa.

For some guys, the gig is so important that they begin preparing in August. Like Brian Schoenroth, Regina's Northgate Mall Santa Claus, who goes all itchy-scratchy during the dog days so he can come to work with an authentic, pull-proof beard at Christmas time. The kids think he's the real thing.

Spoiler alert: He's as real as it's going to get, kids.

Some Santas put their day jobs at risk to don the red suit. Like Kirk Rockwell in Vancouver, who has spent the last 15 years piloting his public transit sleigh in his Santa outfit. This year, his employers, apparently worried that riders won't be able to tell that he's a real bus driver, sought to put an end to it. But so many people complained, that the Grinches came to their senses and Santa rides again.

I had a chance to interview Santa one-on-one recently. A friend took her three-year-old on the pilgrimage, and sensing a big story, I went along. After delighting the three-year-old, he turned and asked the 63-year-old what he wanted for Christmas, and I gave him my standard "world peace" answer.

And for about the first time in more than half a century, I had my picture taken with Santa.

Usually, I admit, it's easy to be cynical about Santa Claus as a shill for the retail industry. If the malls could get away with it, they'd set up his throne and stock the scene with elves in February, just after Valentine's Day. But I was struck by how kind, gentle, patient and wise this guy was with the kids, especially those who were stiff with fear.

For the little ones, this is real. And whatever the old boys behind the fake beards are really like, they handle their sacred trust with dignity and grace.

It's as if these gentlemen are actually possessed by the Spirit of Christmas Past, Present and Future.

Past: As they are a synthesis of numerous traditions, from the ancient Turkish Bishop of Myra to the Coca-Cola Company. No one would come up with Santa Claus in 2013.

Present: As Santa is available on request right now at your neighbourhood mall. All you have to do is get your mom to take you there, and you can ask him for anything. And if he's like the old boy I met the other night, somehow you know he'll come through.

Future: Because for so many children, Santa is hope. Hope is the gift of Christmas, and Santa is the giver.

You go, old white guy.

China makes its first moon landing

Rover, lander snap pics of each other

In this image taken by the on-board camera of the lunar probe Chang'e-3 and made off the screen of the Beijing Aerospace Control Center in Beijing, China's first moon rover, Jade Rabbit, touches the lunar surface Sunday.

State broadcaster China Central Television showed images taken from the lander's camera of the rover and its shadow moving down a sloping ladder and touching the surface, setting off applause in the Beijing control centre.

China has completed the world's first soft landing of a space probe on the moon in nearly four decades.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The mission

- The six-wheeled rover will survey the moon's geological structure and surface and look for natural resources for three months, while the lander will carry out scientific explorations at the landing site for one year.
- The mission marks the next stage in an ambitious space program that aims to eventually put a Chinese astronaut on the moon. China's space program is an enormous source of pride for the country, the third to carry out a lunar soft landing — which does not damage the craft and the equipment it carries.

"We are looking for highly intelligent individuals. To find them, we have devised a test."

Thus began a simple message, written in white text against a black background, signed "3301" and uploaded to a 4chan message board in 2012, kicking off a cryptic Internet mystery known as Cicada 3301.

Consisting of images and encoded messages designed to challenge the most cryptically-minded, the mystery that began with that simple message is a sprawling labyrinth that winds through math, poetry, ancient runes and steampunk, eventually leading those taking up the challenge to real locations across the world, where posters and QR codes are the cache.

Eventually, the ace brains who have cracked the code and overcome obstacles like message boards and forums purposefully seeded with misinformation find themselves in what's known as The Onion Router — a "dark Internet" of sites that are not indexed by search engines.

The puzzles and messages become private and those who got close to the prize are left to wonder what they were participating in.

So what is it all about? Speculation has it that the NSA, CIA or some other government agency is using the teasers to recruit new operatives.

Or perhaps it's a private endeavour looking for cryptology candidates to staff their operations.

Whoever is behind it, only a very select few have been able to learn. And they've been remarkably tight-lipped once the puzzles go private.

The first Cicada puzzle emerged on Jan. 4, 2012. A second was released to the web on the same date in 2013.

Will there be a third iteration? That's just as big a mystery.

Can you spot the real 12 Days of Christmas verse among these mondegreens? ISTOCK

And a paltry tin-affair tree!

Say what? Do you really know what you're singing when it comes to Christmas carol lyrics?

Milk and spiders? Nine lazy Hansons? Sleep in heavenly peas?

It's that time of year: holiday music time. And with holiday music comes all the strange and twisted things we sometimes think we're hearing.

Mondegreens, the moniker for misheard words in song, aren't restricted to holiday standards, of course, but the old-timey language of some seems to serve as a botched-lyric magnet.

Lest you think funny turns on song lyrics are the stuff of childhoods, Missy O'Reilly knows otherwise. She's an actress, comedian and co-owner of Planet Rose, a karaoke haven on Manhattan's Lower East Side.

"I'm the biggest Christmas nerd, so I'm always encouraging people to sing Christmas music," she said. "Some people are really surprised when they see what the real words are."

Look no further than Snopes.com for handy examples submitted by readers of the website that collects and debunks urban legends, folklore, myths, rumours and misinformation. Noting that mondegreens aren't parody, but words we actually think we're listening to, Snopes keeps a list of holiday gems.

For The Twelve Days of Christmas, there's "ten lawyers leaving" and "nine lazy Hansons." Later we've got "six geezers laying," along with "a paltry tin-affair tree." Those are in lieu of lords a-leaping, ladies dancing, geese a-laying and the obligatory partridge in a pear tree, FYI.

If ever you've made it to the fourth verse of Winter Wonderland, you'll be relieved to know it doesn't include "Later on milk and spiders, as we dream by the fire," but rather: "Later on we'll conspire ..." And that snowman you may or may not build in the meadow? You should pretend he's "Parson Brown," not "sparse and brown," or "parched and brown." Just sayin'.

There are most definitely no "peas" in Silent Night, but "heavenly peace." In Santa Claus Is Comin' to Town, the big guy in red does this: "making a list, checkin' it twice." Not this: "making a list, of chicken and rice."

Sometimes, O'Reilly said, an entire holiday song is one big what?! She was thinking of the haunting yet beautiful — to the ears of some critics — Fairytale of New York, co-written by Shane MacGowen of the Celtic punk group The Pogues.

An Irish immigrant recalling a Christmas Eve stay in a New York City drunk tank tells of an inebriated older cellmate whose rendition of a traditional ballad spins the thickly brogued narrator (MacGowen) into a raunchy imagining of a debauched life with the old ditty's female character.

"It's a beautiful, beautiful song but people are always confused by what the words are," O'Reilly said. "It's really hard to decipher the words."

Not to get all wonky, but the song isn't really a mondegreen. Grant Barrett, co-host of the public radio show on language A Way with Words defines mondegreens this way, explaining they can happen for poetry and other spoken language as well:

"You're mishearing where one word ends and another word begins. This is called misdivision. And sometimes you're mishearing a word itself. It sounds like another word to you, and so you try to match that sound up with a word that you already know that kind of fits into the plot, if there is one. And that's called reanalysis," he said.

Don't mind him. He's a lexicographer, and he claims he has no mondegreens of his own.

"I misremember," said Barrett, in San Diego. "That's different. I always joke that I know the first 10 per cent of thousands of songs and that's it."

Babes are little mondegreen machines. Paula Werne, who works at a holiday theme park in Santa Claus, Ind., had one in her son, John, who is now 22.

As a tot of three he took to singing Jolly Old Saint Nicholas to his stuffed animals out of a Christmas songbook, mom said. Only he turned "Christmas Eve is coming soon; now you dear old man," into "dirty old man."

Them's fightin' words in Werne's town, but she and her husband let it go. "It was too cute and he was so happy that he knew all the words," Werne said. "By the next year, he'd figured it out. I still sing it that way, though."

Russell Rabut doesn't have any mondegreens, but he is one.

The 22-year-old senior at San Diego State University, majoring in — what else, English — plays rhythm guitar in a band called The Mondegreens. He took the name to his band mates, all high school friends from Chico, Calif., after a fellow student in a creative writing class mentioned it.

"I had never heard of it before. It's a very beautiful word and it's cool how it came to exist," he said. "It just seems like such an eloquent irony, that existing art can spin something poetic by accident."

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

What's in a word?

What's a mondegreen? According to Grant Barrett, co-host of the public radio show A Way With Words, the word mondegreen can be traced to Sylvia Wright and a column she wrote in Harper's Magazine in 1954 titled The Death of Lady Mondegreen. Wright discovered that for years she had botched the last line of the first stanza of the Scottish folk ballad The Bonnie Earl o'Moray.

How it goes, with spellings based on updates of antiquated English: "They have slain the Earl of Moray, and laid him on the green."

What she heard: "They have slain the Earl of Moray, and Lady Mondegreen."

Allegedly ordering friends to beat up Barron Hilton appears to be just a small part of Lindsay Lohan's wild week in Miami for Art Basel, as the troubled post-rehab starlet reportedly "threw tantrums all week," according to Radar Online.

"Lindsay was a mess at every event at Art Basel," a source says.

So what had Lohan so in a state? Run-ins with the Miami-based ex-girlfriend of Morgan O'Connor, the 18-year-old model Lohan has been dating.

"Lindsay had a tantrum when she would see Morgan's ex-girlfriend at events," a source explains.

Entertaining the kids in the car, plane or train on the way to grandma's house is a challenge. But parents are often left scrambling to find something for the kids to do once there. You don't want to drag along the whole toy room, but find some space to pack items to keep the kids busy.

Building blocks, like Lego, are terrific as the kids can continually create new things. Buy the bucket of blocks versus the kits. The kits tend to have an "all finished" sense once completed, whereas the "free building" can go on forever.

Stop by the dollar store and pick up basic arts and crafts supplies. Non-permanent markers and construction paper are great for making decorations.

Cookies, gifts and...meditation?

Q&A. The big man in red is exceptionally busy around this time of year, what with toy-making and list-checking — but he did find a few minutes to chat with us

Santa says oatmeal raisin cookies are great but he'll skip the eggnog. ISTOCK

Greetings, Santa! We're so grateful to speak with you, considering how hectic your schedule must be right now.
It's the most wonderful time of the year! And it is busy, but it is always a delight to talk to you.

How do you manage your time?
That's one of the most difficult things about the job — that it does take a lot of time and energy, focus, concentration, meditation and prayers.

Santa meditates?
Of course — everyone should have meditation. It's the moments of thinking of nothing that so many wonderful joyous things come. It's kind of a gift that I give to myself as Santa, that I'm able to take a moment and turn the lights down and light my magical candle and think.

We bet Mrs. Claus loves to see you in a relaxed state.
Even at this time of year, Mrs. Claus and the elves are extremely busy. They're keeping up with me, being sure that I have my food, my time, and keeping the list on who's naughty and nice...

Say, what kinds of cookies should we leave out for you on Christmas Eve?
I'm trying to lean toward oatmeal and raisin — it's a little healthier for me. I'm trying to watch my weight. Otherwise, how could I ever get down all those chimneys? And I would suggest carrots for the reindeer, although they are leaning heavily toward candy corn. [And] skim milk all the way! (Laughs)

Should we leave you some eggnog too?
I'll be driving so I'll have to pass.

You've likely got lots of people to visit. How many letters do you think you'll receive this year?
Millions. I'm already getting letters from children who tell me what they want. And some of the most wonderful letters include the whole family — my brother wants this, my mom, my dad [want this]. Even if you're on the naughty list, you have a little bit of time left.

So how can someone on the naughty list end up on the nice list?
By being nice. If you're a child, by being respectful and obedient. If you're an adult, by helping someone, by being nice. It's very important.

We want to know how you spend your time when you're not working. For example, how do you spend your summers?
I enjoy fishing. We have some wonderful fishing up in the North Pole toward southern Alaska.

And what do you do the day after Christmas?
I'll go back to the North Pole, collect the elves and the reindeer and we'll settle down for a nice, long winter's nap. [Then we start working again] as soon as I wake up. When you love what you do, you never have to worry about working because it's a joy. We start to think about the toys for next year. METRO

Cherry-White Chocolate Drop Cookies: Beat the baking guilt

This recipe makes two dozen cookies. MATTHEW MEAD/ THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

At this time of year, we are constantly reminded that happy families are supposed to have special bonding moments while baking luscious holiday treats. If we really loved our children, we'd be delighted by the mess they make while dumping flour on the floor and spilling raw eggs down the side of the stove.

And so begins the guilt. Not only are we supposed to be baking, we're also supposed to be enjoying it.

To attempt to assuage the guilt, try these one-bowl cookies.

Ingredients

- 2 sticks (1 cup) butter, softened
- 1/2 cup granulated sugar
- 1/2 cup packed brown sugar
- 1 egg
- 1 tsp almond extract
- 1/4 cup milk
- 3 cups all-purpose flour
- 1/2 tsp baking soda
- 1/2 cup dried cherries
- 1/2 cup dried cranberries
- 1 cup white chocolate chips

1. Heat the oven to 375 F. Line 2 baking sheets with kitchen parchment.

2. In a large bowl, use an electric mixer to beat the butter and both sugars until fluffy, 2 to 3 minutes. Add the egg, almond extract and milk, then mix well. Add the flour and baking soda, then mix just until the dry ingredients are well mixed in. Mix in the cherries, cranberries and chocolate chips.

3. Drop the dough in 2-tablespoon mounds on the prepared baking sheets, leaving 2 inches between them. Bake, in batches if necessary, for 12 to 14 minutes, or until just lightly browned at the edges and still slightly soft at the centre. Leave on the baking sheet for 2 minutes, then use a spatula to transfer to a wire rack to cool completely. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Four nuggets with small fries and a small Oreo McFlurry are equivalent in fat to 28 Heinz Mini Mozzarella Pizza Bagel Bites.

Grilled chicken snack wrap/ mini fries / chocolate milk

The grilled chicken allows for some fries and the chocolate milk saves the calories and fat of the McFlurry.

Indulge in a very Christmas cheesecake

1. Heat the oven to 375 F. Coat a deep 10-inch cake pan with baking spray, then line the bottom with kitchen parchment.

2. In a food processor, combine the chocolate wafer cookies and brown sugar. Pulse until finely ground. Drizzle in the butter and pulse to combine. Transfer the mixture to the prepared pan and press evenly over the bottom. Bake for 12 minutes. Remove from the oven and set aside. Lower the oven temperature to 300 F.

3. Meanwhile, in a large bowl use an electric mixer on medium-low to beat cream cheese until smooth. Take care to not beat in any extra air, but to scrape down bowl thoroughly to avoid lumps. Add granulated sugar and beat again, scraping the bowl thoroughly. Add the eggs one at a time, again incorporating gently, but thoroughly scraping the bowl.

4. Scrape in the seeds from the vanilla bean or add the vanilla extract. Stir in the bittersweet chocolate. Pour the batter into the prepared pan over the crust. Tap the pan gently on the counter to eliminate any air bubbles. Place the pan into a larger roasting pan. Pour enough boiling water into the roasting pan, taking care not to get any into the cheesecake, to come halfway up the sides of the cake.

5. Bake for 50 to 60 minutes, or until just barely jiggly at the centre. Turn off the oven and carefully prop the door open with a spoon. Allow to cool 2 hours. Remove pan from the oven and refrigerate until completely cold, at least 4 hours.

6. When ready to unmould the cheesecake, run a paring knife around the edge. Dip just the bottom of the pan in hot water for 1 minute to loosen the crust. Place a large plate over the top of the pan, then flip the pan over so that the cheesecake is upside down. The cake should release onto the plate. Remove the parchment from the crust and place a serving platter over it. Flip the cake a second time to end with the cheesecake right side up.

7. Microwave the red currant jelly for 1 minute and stir until smooth. Spread evenly over the top of the cheesecake. Garnish the edges with chopped pistachios. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Should we bring teaching to the electronic tablet?

Will iPads be the next school desk staple? ISTOCK

School on a screen. One in three kids using iPads in class admit to playing games: Canadian study

A third of Quebec students surveyed about using iPads in class admitted to playing games during school hours and an astounding 99 per cent said they found the gadgets distracting, suggests a new study based on the experiences of more than 6,000 tablet-toting kids.

But even though just a few students said they felt a tablet helped them learn better, the report's co-authors still concluded that schools should invest in the technology, although cautiously.

Researchers surveyed 6,057 students, who were enrolled in Grades 6 through 10, and 302 teachers about their experiences so far in using tablets daily in the classroom.

The report concludes that outfitting large numbers of students with costly tablets is a worthwhile endeavour, provided that teachers are well prepared and trained for the radical shift in delivering their lesson plans.

iPositives

- When teachers were asked about the benefits of using iPads in class, about half said it opened up better access to information, 40 per cent cited the easy portability of the devices, and about a third said it allowed for greater collaboration.

"It would appear that incorporating the iPad into education constitutes a necessary risk for schools, and that this technological tool has breathtaking cognitive potential," states the report.

But co-author Thierry Karsenti noted that so far, teachers have generally not been well prepared to teach with tablets.

The report notes that 70 per cent of the teachers surveyed said they had "never or very rarely" used an iPad before they were introduced into their classrooms, versus 53.6 per cent of their students.

"Some of the teachers were getting the iPad on the first day of school with their students, can you imagine? All the students were on Facebook, Twitter and the teachers were like, 'Oh my God, this is not working,' and blaming the technology because he or she was not ready," said Karsenti, the Canada research chair for information and communication technologies in education.

"You have teachers who are fully unaware of what's going on in the classroom, they're sitting reading their notes and the students are doing whatever they want."

The report notes that a "surprising" number of students — more than one in three — admitted to playing games in class, sometimes with their teachers' permission after an assignment or task was completed.

Researchers were also surprised that, in some ways, the tablet technology wasn't been used to its full potential. Students said they did relatively little reading on their tablets and were still using paper textbooks, while many assignments were still be submitted on paper rather than electronically.

About 85 per cent of the students said they never or rarely used the iPad to prepare written work.

The straightest path may not be the fastest

The severe market crash in October 2008 changed my life. I started running to regain my health, both emotional and physical. Shortly after I took my first steps, I ran the Gobi March in China in June '09, followed by the Atacama Crossing in Chile in '10 and the Sahara Race in Egypt in '11. In this post, I share a lesson about life, learned from the desert.

LESSONS FROM THE DESERT
life@metronews.ca

The simplest path between two points is a straight line. While mathematically true, in life this is rarely the case. Up and downs, twists and turns, that's the norm we all know. In desert running, where you'd think the shortest path would be the one most advantageous, often times it isn't. In running, as in life, while one path may seem harder, longer or more difficult, it may be the one that pays the most rewards.

When facing the Sahara Desert I was advised to carefully pick my running lines and avoid simply darting ahead. The desert course we ran had signal flags roughly every 100m, so that racers knew the specific direction to be followed. Unlike the rocky desert terrain of the Gobi or the Atacama deserts where I had excelled, the Sahara's sand was soft and its dunes windswept daily.

Now, instead of running the shortest distance, I would now be scanning to calculate my path of least resistance: Which side of the sand dune was wind packed? Which side was sun-baked with firm, vein-like grooves? Where might there be rock sediments I could run on with a hardened surface? I ran a longer route and was a degree off course for most of the race, but it paved a swift arrival to the finish line.

Have you looked at all the alternative paths to overcome your challenges?

Snowboarding. Regina native wins slopestyle event as Canadians narrowly miss podium sweep

If the first snowboard slopestyle competition of the season is any indication, Canada may have a lot to cheer for when the event makes its Olympic debut in Sochi in February.

Regina's Mark McMorris took gold at the Dew Tour on Sunday in Breckenridge, Colo., finishing the 17-man field with 97.80 points, while fellow Canadian Maxence Parrot of Bromont, Que., finished third with 89.00. Montreal's Sebastien Toutant placed fourth with 87.60. Sven Thorgren of Sweden prevented Canada from sweeping the podium, taking silver with 91.00 points.

"Canada is just destroying it right now," McMorris said. "The slopes team is really strong and I think we're going to have a really good showing in Sochi."

After a fall in qualifying, McMorris collected 95.00 points in his first run of the final, which featured his signature straight double backflip, and a backside 1080 double cork. He capped his second run with a 1440 triple cork.

"I was going at the last jump not sure what I wanted to do exactly," said the 20-year-old McMorris.

"I had nothing to lose. I told myself everything was going perfect and I had to do a triple."

For Parrot, Sunday's performance marked his first career medal in three years on the Dew Tour circuit.

"It's great to finally get on the podium," Parrot said. "I think I'm feeling more and more comfortable with my manoeuvres and executing them at high speed."

NATHAN DENETTE/THE CANADIAN PRESS

An eager group of 25 players broke camp Sunday and got ready to head overseas for final preparations for the world junior hockey championship.

But only 22 will still be there when the tournament opens Dec. 26 in Malmo, Sweden.

Coach Brent Sutter said the final cuts — one defenceman and two forwards — will be decided on many factors, including injuries.

"They're not easy decisions, but the reality is we've got a couple or three guys banged up and we're not exactly sure," said Sutter. "Hopefully they can skate when we get over there.

"Whether they'll be ready for the first exhibition game, we're not sure. All these guys deserve to be able to push to get on the team and they're going to have a few more days to do so."

The team will play three pre-tournament games — Friday against Finland, Sunday against Sweden and the following day against Switzerland. Sutter hopes to make the cuts after the first exhibition game so he can use the full squad for the last two.

The key question is high-scoring winger Jonathan Drouin, who is recovering from a concussion but expects to resume skating when the team arrives in Sweden on Monday.

Another is rushing defenceman Josh Morrissey, who has been nagged by an undisclosed injury for a month but who expects to be able to practise this week.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
You may have to bluff your way through the sort of situation you would usually cope with quite easily today.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
As some of your views are a bit controversial there could be some interesting skirmishes today. But don't make a scene if someone who disagrees with you challenges your grasp of the facts.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Others may be having second thoughts about what you are doing but you have no such doubts. Even if you do make a mistake or two along the way your momentum and sense of purpose will keep you moving towards your goal.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
Your confidence is sky-high at the moment and because of that you are ready to risk almost anything to prove you are the best. Before the day is over even your critics will be singing your praises and willing you to succeed.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
You will get your way on the work front easily enough today but you may upset a few people along the way. That won't worry you in the slightest.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
You will be rather outspoken today, which is not that unusual, but make sure your criticisms are justified or you could make enemies of people who should be your friends.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Mercury combined with your ruler Jupiter warns that what others tell you and what they believe may be two completely different things.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
You don't lack for ideas at the moment but you seem strangely reluctant to let the world know about them. Maybe that's not such a bad thing.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
The answers you seek are not that hard to find but you will surely find them quicker today if you get some assistance. And don't make things too complicated for yourself.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
You must check facts and figures carefully today as Mercury linked to retrograde Jupiter warns that either someone is trying to deceive you or you will in some way deceive yourself.
